

L'île aux fleurs uses a repetitive, looping structure to expose his points. The filmmaker repeatedly returns to the same concepts, but each time strikes out from those concepts along a new path of meaning. Having explored the concepts from many angles, he finishes with the angle of freedom. It fits his previous narrative structure in its free-associative feel, even though the film has not explored freedom explicitly before.